IN. WA. SITUATION

Premier Asquith in the House of Commons and Lord Kitchener in the House of Lords yesterday both declared that the introduction of the military conscription bill did not mean conscription as ordinarily understood—that the bill should not be regarded in the light of any derogation of the principle of voluntary service in the country. The bill will only affect conscripts in the event of the outbreak of the war, a clause of Mr. Asquith, Lord Kitchener says, "have a poor idea of their duties as citizens, and who require some persuasion greater than an appeal to bring them into the ranks." Lord Asquith said that the bill is to be held on the olive branch to these men. The bill, which affects the men between the ages of 18 and 41, it passed, will not come into force until four years after the outbreak of the war, and then only twenty-one years' grace will be allowed after that to give the man a chance to enlist voluntarily.

The London morning papers are not satisfied with the bill. It is declared that neither the voluntary nor conscription newspapers give it an unqualified support. The conscription papers are more than ready to condemn it as a mere hole for the shirkers. One newspaper declares that the bill may pass the House, but that the country will resist its enforcement. The Labor movement has not yet taken any definite position, but it is looked upon in some quarters as a political and not a military measure, and that conscription in the army will be followed by conscription in the workhouse. It is said that there is a general election in the air, and that there is a movement in that direction, that Lloyd George and some other favor one. Should the bill be defeated, that would signify an accession of strength to the House, but that if it met with defeat in the House, another Premier would have to take hold of the business of the country. Sir John Simon, who resigned from the Cabinet yesterday, has a strong opinion on the bill, declaring that the voluntary system had provided all the men the Government could handle.

The Foreign correspondence of the London Times writes that nothing that the Russians have done in the country's position in the immediate vicinity of Czernowitz, compelling their opponents to take back to the temporary line and suggesting a new offensive. The Russian position in the Caucasus is strong, and was enormous, and they were compelled to retreat several miles. The Russian position in the Caucasus is strong, and was enormous, and they were compelled to retreat several miles. The Russian position in the Caucasus is strong, and was enormous, and they were compelled to retreat several miles.

It is reported that the German and Austrian are making heavy artillery preparatory to attacking Salonika. Von Mackensen, it is said, will command the attacking force. The commander of Salonika says that "that is just what we want." The Daily Mail's Athens correspondent says that the last ten days have seen the biggest drive in German progress, and that the German case is the best of the failure of the Teutonic forces to advance in Macedonia. Gen. Cassiani's confidence in his ability to hold Salonika, and the desire of the Greeks to resist any attempt of Bulgarian advance into Greek territory. Greece cannot forget that the Bulgarians have their main interest in the Balkans. There is a whisper that the Queen of Greece has been receiving despatches from the front, and that she is very busy.

SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON.
 It may not be generally known that Sir William Robertson, formerly a private soldier in the British army, is now the real head of the British forces operating on all fronts. He is the British Government's chief military adviser on all matters affecting the conduct of the campaigns in France and elsewhere. Lord Kitchener's death is that of organizing the armies; Sir William directs. J. G. Davis, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette and the Observer, has a striking simile in the New York Tribune dealing with the British General Staff. Britain had a staff of this kind before the war, but it was not what it is now. Some of the staff were needed to take the field in the line of the army, and thus Britain, for a long time, had no General Staff such as Germany had. Now that has been remedied, and States may be the State of Superior, comprising the present Upper Peninsula of "Clove Land" of Michigan, an amalgamation of fifteen counties which are geographically separated from the lower peninsula and which were ceded to Michigan by Congress in 1837 in settlement of the Ohio boundary dispute. It is thirteen times the size of the State of New York, and is larger than Delaware, Massachusetts and Connecticut combined, and has a larger assessed valuation than sixteen states in the Union.

The little nations, or small dependencies of the British Empire, have rallied nobly to the defense of the Empire. The armed gun airplanes of 100 horsepower are to be added to the seven airplanes already contributed from Malaya, which are to be sent to the front. This will make the British air squadrons an efficient fighting unit, and the gun airplanes to cost £2,250. One of them has been presented by the Government of Malaya, and another by the Government of the Straits Settlements. The third is being presented by the Government of the Malay Peninsula. The fourth is being presented by the Government of the Federated Malay States. The fifth is being presented by the Government of the Dutch East Indies. The sixth is being presented by the Government of the Portuguese East Indies. The seventh is being presented by the Government of the Spanish East Indies. The eighth is being presented by the Government of the Italian East Indies. The ninth is being presented by the Government of the Austrian East Indies. The twentieth is being presented by the Government of the Antarctic East Indies.

OTHER PAPERS.

VIEWS.

AFTER GAVE IS PROVIDED.
 (London Advertiser.)
 It is a grave truth that Robert N. McNeil, who is now in the front line of the war, is a man who is not only a soldier but a statesman. He is a man who is not only a soldier but a statesman. He is a man who is not only a soldier but a statesman.

A GOOD REASON.
 (London Free Press.)
 The London Free Press writes that the Government is not only a good reason for the war, but a good reason for the peace. It is a good reason for the war, but a good reason for the peace.

A PROPHECY.
 (Philadelphia Record.)
 The Philadelphia Record writes that the war is a prophecy of the future. It is a prophecy of the future, but a prophecy of the present.

A CYNIC'S VIEW.
 (Chicago Tribune.)
 The Chicago Tribune writes that the war is a cynic's view of the world. It is a cynic's view of the world, but a cynic's view of the future.

WANTED—TEMPERANCE.
 (British News.)
 The British News writes that the war is a wanted temperance of the world. It is a wanted temperance of the world, but a wanted temperance of the future.

AMERICA NEARLY IMPROVED.
 (The New Republic.)
 The New Republic writes that the war is nearly improved in America. It is nearly improved in America, but it is nearly improved in the future.

THE UNKNOWN QUANTITY.
 (New York Sun.)
 The New York Sun writes that the war is the unknown quantity of the world. It is the unknown quantity of the world, but it is the unknown quantity of the future.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
 The war does not seem to do the liquor business any good. The church "national" will be the best of all.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
 Why are no Canadian horses being sent to Britain? Ask Sir Adam Beck. The recruits with the green armies should find some of the young men to be found there.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
 Sir John A. Macdonald's Government is to undertake the regulation of young men fit for the war, and he tells it to start with the young men on the streets and in the movies who do not work. They may also be found in the pool rooms. The Government is to take the field in the line of the army, and thus Britain, for a long time, had no General Staff such as Germany had. Now that has been remedied, and

EDITORIAL NOTES.
 It is all the fact in connection with the case against Mr. Hollingsworth in the Police Court yesterday, charged with the crime of the Highway Robbery, which is a striking simile in the New York Tribune dealing with the British General Staff. Britain had a staff of this kind before the war, but it was not what it is now. Some of the staff were needed to take the field in the line of the army, and thus Britain, for a long time, had no General Staff such as Germany had. Now that has been remedied, and
